What's a Giclée?

The word giclée is used to describe a printing process that uses hi-resolution inkjet printing technology to produce fine art reproductions with amazing detail and color fidelity. Giclée prints can be produced on various types of materials like fine art canvas and archival cotton rag papers. The inks we use in this process are pigmented, fade resistant ink sets that have been tested to last upwards of 200+ years under normal lighting conditions. The color gamut (printable colors) of the giclée process allows the artist to match the colors of the original painting. Kathy and I take great pride in using our years of experience working with color to offer you the highest quality fine art giclée reproduction that will last for generations. ~ John Fritz
